

WD-40 Lubricant

Product Images

Description

Created in 1953 by three technicians at a San Diego rocket chemical company, this household name product is made from a unique blend of lubricants and anti-corrosion agents and has over 2000 documented uses. WD-40 has a wide variety of different applications, but is most commonly used to prevent against rust and for the lubrication of moving parts

- Warning: WD-40 is highly-flammable and potentially fatal if swallowed.
- Famous all-purpose lubricant
- Anti-corrosion properties
- Ideal for water displacement
- Silicone-free, electronics friendly
- Distinctive cloudy amber colour
- EC 1272/2008: 3111